FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 8th, 1866.

The Fenians.

The long-talked-of Fenian movement has begun. The news for the past week has been somewhat startling, but not altogether unexpected. The Fenians have gone to work—blood has been shed—the Irish flocking to the border, and the war for Ireland has begun.

The sympathies of our people are with the Government, and the Government is bound to see its operations from American soil. The Fenians propose to arm and equip themselves and invade Canada from the States borders, and fight the battles of Ireland in Canada, on British soil. They have already commenced the movement. A full force under Col. O'Neal, of Nashville, crossed over to the Canada shore, took possession of Fort Erie, fought two battles, and finding themselves about to be flanked by a superior force, recrossed on the 3d inst., thirty-two of their number being captured by the British and the balance by the U. S. forces on this shore. Strict orders have been issued by Maj.-Gen. Meade, commanding on our frontier, to arrest all suspicious persons, and permit no invasion of Canada from this shore. All parties attempting it to be arrested as violators of the neutrality laws of the United States. Some think these orders will leave the Fenians without base or supplies, and that the movement will soon come to grief. This is our opinion. Others think the U. S. Government is openly opposing the Fenian movement, but secretly aiding it, and that the Irish will be armed, supplied and reinforced from this country.

We confess that our sympathies are with the Irish, but if we had a personal friend among them we would advise him to take part in the Fenian war.

As stated by the friends of the Fenians, the late movement was only a feint, and the important move will be made immediately from another point. We are at a loss to imagine how the Fenian army is to be supplied with a hostile army in front, and no supplies or men to reach it. After the evacuation of Fort Erie, the Fenians, the U. S. Consul was by a mob of British soldiers. He has issued an apology.

Graphic reports from New York state that a grand movement was placed on foot soon; while a dispatch from Washington says the Government considers the invasion of Canada at an end. It further states that the British Minister has demanded the surrender from our Government of the captured Fenians, and that the same will be complied with.

Centre Stephens, in a speech at New York, on Monday night, said he had received if not betrayed by both wings of Fenians. The New York Herald's financial article says the Fenian's raid upon the ruins of Fort Erie failed to create the slightest disturbance among the financial community, and an inglorious termination of the foray into British territory is predicted.

STILL LATER.—The President has issued a proclamation forbidding all Fenian operations in the United States, and ordered the arrest of all suspected parties.

The Cotton Market.

In our market, and elsewhere, cotton seems about to reach the low figure of a few weeks since, when the finest samples could not command over 25 cents. Under the influence of a steady decline at Liverpool, quotations have now been gradually reduced to 26@27, the latter being the outside figure to-day.

It is perhaps, however, a mere question of time, and holders certainly seem to be of that opinion, as they persistently refuse all offers at the present low rates. There can be no opinion on any subject more strongly entertained than the prevailing one in this section that cotton must go up to 50c before the new crop comes in. Whatever may be the foundation for such an opinion, it is certainly a firmly established one in the minds of holders, which no fluctuations, however great, seem to materially affect.

To this more than to any other cause may be ascribed the present dullness and inactivity of the market. There are plenty of buyers, and eager ones at that, but while it is quoted here at 26@27 (if, indeed, quotations be more than merely nominal) no sales of any magnitude will be made unless under the pressure of actual necessity. Holders are determined to wait for higher prices—buyers believe in the prospect of a future advance and naturally purchase at the widest possible margin of profits—buyers differ, and that is, as correct, we can express it, the exact condition of the market here.

A few bales changed hands to-day, the best article of Tennessee Cotton did not, we believe, bring over 27—a decline from yesterday's figures.—Nashville

Alvin Replies to Concilium.

MISTER EDITOR:—I don't want no body to meddle with my Grammar, my Syntax, my spelling, nor nothin that's mine in this communication. I write to you a short Poem and likewise Epistles, about a half moon ago and they was meddled with. A very bootiful writer in your paper cum rite down on my Poem and squasht her—very disrespectful and spiteful. He cum mity n squasht me also and likewise, but he didn't do it. Them papers that had it didn't circulate on this creek, not much. I squasht every one ov 'em that had it cum in over this way, and I'll continue to do likewise to all sich. I'd fit it out on this line and sed nothin, but as Sally Jane, nor nobody out here, haint seed that onsluter on me and my writin, I'm smartly recovered from the blow. It's more a human natur can bar, Mister Editor, to stand quiet by and say nothin and see itself aboused, and what is wusser to see its best writers and Poems aboused with impoonty, nor hadn't ought to bar it. If the young honors which is growin so thick upon my brow should git cut short after all and nipt in the bud, a smart sized calamity, and disastrous, will happen, and Mister Concilium will be thar and mixt up with 'em also. I don't want to eke nobody but I wonder if he ever herd ov a derrick comin up behind a fellow unbeknowns at night and liften him into the middle ov that country whar the wicked cease from troublin any body, and scriblers and printers are at rest. Well, thar is sich a maceheen. If sum folks don't mind they'll find it in operashun, and they'll find, too, if they don't larn to mind their own business, that they don't know the first rudiments ov prudence nor kommon sense.

Jest here, Mister Editor, I concluded to go over and see Uncle Samuel. I tuck the paper which I kept concealed like, low down in my cote tail pocket, and showed it to him. He looked at that spiteful article and soon spoke fitting words ov cheer. Says he, "Alvin, don't let this hurt your troubled spirit, for this 'bootiful writer,' as you are pleased to call him, is not steeped all over quite in Syntax and Prosody, but like Achilles ov old, thar's a small piece ov his heel whar a plaster will stick. Strike at that. Your Uncle Samuel knows Syntax and Prosody and all sich. He knows Skulptur and Paintin, and ought to know 'em. He seed the skulptured marble bust ov Archimedes in the very room whar he was found at the takin ov Syracuse. He's seed the painted pictur ov the Argonauts, the golden fleece, and the dragon in the very garden at Colchis whar Jason found 'em ov old. He's seed the track ov Leander on the sand whar he swam the Hellespont.—And more bootiful things he's slept all night in that grov ov Idem, Paris and Enone used to meet and kiss, and what the great golden fruit to that Italian Aphrodite. Your Uncle Samuel knows these things, and all sich, and he'll help you and Thaddeus in this hour ov trouble."

Uncle Samuel got warm as he proceeded. Says he, "Alvin, you and Thaddeus stand aside a little and let me have a 'little talk with this learned Theban.' "He then said ov you whar you say, 'The same is still reported among the Jews till yet.' Jest above he writes his self, 'We rise up from their perusal,' &c. That 'up' is jest as bad as your 'still,' and violates the same rule.

He says, whar you write, 'If any worth ov merit ave,' violates a plain rule ov Grammar, and jest below he writes, 'While the too frequent use ov abbreviations, such as I'd, I'm, e'er, 'tis, &c., tend greatly to lessen,' &c. Thar that same plain plain rule of Grammar goes under, in that word 'tend,' which should be tends, and a little piece ov spellin goes under in that word lessen, which should be lessen.

"It seems Thaddeus wrote 'Love is inate, conscience is inate,' and Concilium says, 'inate, is it not? Besides, Kant and Locke will pretty well satisfy you that there is no such thing as an 'inate' idea.' "

Here Uncle Samuel laft right out—"Inate!" "And he spells exist, exhist, with an h, a little further on, and forty others if I had time to write 'em down. And Locke—that Locke was picked and busted more an a hundred years ago! His 'sensational' and 'no idea' doctriins culminated in sich as David Hume, Jeremy Bentham and sich, and all ungodliness. Yes sir, all ungodliness, except such a wooden God as can be got into a man through sum one ov the five senses, which is wusser an no God at all. Locke, I say Locke! who teches him now with a fifty foot pole except infidels and sich. It's readin sich books as that, makes this Concilium say that 'conscience is the child of Education, and don't know right from wrong until taught by Divine Revelation and the Church in what right and wrong consists.' "

Uncle Samuel here took down a Greek book—the Phedon of Plato—writ 400 years before the Church, and read: "Thar there is but one God, that we ought to love and serve him, and try to resemble him in holiness and righteousness. * * * Thar there is nothing solid and substantial but piety, and that it is the gift of God. * * * Thar it is a crime to hurt our enemies, or revenge ourselves for the injuries which we receive. * * * Thar it is better to suffer wrong than to do it, and better to die than to sin.—"

Uncle Samuel was going on to compare what St. Paul, Justin Martyr and Clement say about the natural light that enlightens the conscience ov all men, both Jews and Gentiles. But I found he had forgotten the subject, so I left him and hurried back home to sifeck this plaster on the vulnerable part of Concilium's heel.

He says we haint got no painters nor sculptors here! I was up at town whar he'll find any finer paintin than that at Edmundson's, at Petway's and at Solon Rose's next week. And whar'll he find such sculptur as the birds and flowers and tombstones cut by Crow and Woodring, and used to be cut by Cader Daucum in your city? Mister Concilium is trying to make leetle ov these things cause they is home productions.—He ought to find himself come up missin if he does it any more. I reckon he has a hankerin after greasy Italians and greasy picturs over thar. But he'll find we know Trojan Greeks from Cannibals and all sich.

I'd had another Poem writ by this time, but keepin them papers off ov my creek and out ov the serkle ov my fame has occupied me considerable up to the present—but its over now, so look out for

Yours truly,
ALVIN.

Another Steamboat Disaster.

Another terrible steamboat disaster on the Mississippi has been announced by telegraph. On Thursday, 31st ult., the steamer City of Memphis, from the port of New Orleans, and for St. Louis, when near the foot of Buck Island, some forty miles below Memphis, exploded one of her boilers, tearing away the forward part of the cabin, and setting the boat on fire. She had on board at the time of the explosion twenty-eight cabin passengers and sixty-five deck, all told, and was heavily laden with railroad iron.

EFFECT OF THE EXPLOSION.

So great was the force of the explosion that all the forward part of the cabins, the texas and pilot house were hurled into the river, shattering the after cabins almost into splinters. Many persons above and below were swept into eternity, and two-thirds of all on the lower deck were blown into the water, scalded and killed. The two pilots, Frank Derdue and Geo. Britton, and the steersman, Geo. Hanger, who were in the pilot house at the time, were killed and blown into the river.

THE BOAT TAKES FIRE.

Immediately after the explosion, the wreck took fire, producing one of the most terrible scenes on record. There was a number of kegs of powder in the hold, which Captain Thompson, who had himself barely escaped death, had the presence of mind to have taken up and thrown overboard, thereby preventing further destruction of life. The flames soon drove the few survivors into the river, each one improvising a sort of life preserver out of anything within reach.

How many were lost is as yet unknown; but Mr. Clark, the clerk, estimates the total number lost and injured at sixty.—Ez.

The Bankrupt act recently passed by the House will come before the Senate in a few days. The Senate has been carefully canvassed, and in view of an anticipated commercial crisis, many who were opposed to the policy of the Bankrupt Law have become its strongest supporters. Edwin James has forwarded to Mr. Jenckes, thro' whose exertions this bill was got through the House, an able statement explaining the complicated legislation in England upon the subject, and showing that this bill is entirely free from those defects.

A New York paper calls attention to the fact that, notwithstanding that there are no Southern members in Congress, the scenes which almost daily occur in both Houses are far more disgraceful and frequent than previous to their withdrawal. Scarcely a day now passes but one member calls the other a liar and scamp, and there the matter ends. Pistols and coffee have gone out of fashion, but the insulting propensities of members continue.

EUROPEAN advices by the Hermann and Moravin indicate no material change in the situation. A conference at Paris proposed between representatives of France, Russia, England, Austria, Prussia, and Italy, under the presidency of Drouyn de L'Huys, but Austria's assent to the proposition is doubtful, and it is not believed the conference could do more than temporarily postpone the conflict.

We learn from the Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Dispatch that a friend of that great and gallant military leader, is writing a history of General Patrick R. Cleburne. He desires those of his soldiers who remember incidents or anecdotes of the "Stone wall of the West," to write out and forward the same to the editor of that paper.

A New York letter states that the near prospect of hostilities in Europe is having the effect to diminish the applications for passage on the part of American families, as the belief is that the war will be general. Many Germans who were going on a visit to "faderland" this summer, have changed their minds, under the apprehension that if they were to go they would have some difficulty in keeping out of the clutches of the conscription officers.

It has been stated that Gen. Fitzhugh Lee commanded the Fenian cavalry in the Canadian invasion, but the statement is now believed to be untrue.

Brevities and News Items.

"I'm very much pressed for time," as the man said when his wife hugged and kissed him to coax a gold watch from him.

The cholera landed at New York by the late arrivals is reported to be of a malignant type.

The reports of the crops up the Arkansas, near the river, are encouraging, but the crops in the interior, it is said, will be almost an utter failure.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—No decision has yet been reached by the President in regard to granting the application for the release of Mr. Davis on bail.

DISPATCHES from Richmond state the counsel for Mr. Davis intend making application to the court there now sitting for the release of their client on parole, and think they will be successful.

The South, says the Louisville Democrat, complains that she is not represented in Congress. She can be consoled by the fact that a large portion of the North is still worse off. It is misrepresented.

It is stated by some medical writer that cholera never visits the vicinity of Sulphur Springs, and that an application of flour of Sulphur to the feet is a preventative of the disease.

High Fenian officials say Gen. W. H. Jackson, late of the Confederate army, has accepted a commission of Brigadier General in the Fenian army. It is not credited by his friends.

A genius from the land of wooden nutmegs, says he has invented a machine, which will, when set in motion—but that's the difficulty—chase a hog over a ten acre lot, catch, yoke, and ring him into "sassen-gers, work his bristles into shoe brushes, and manufacture his tail into a cork screw.

Mr. J. J. McCann, of Nashville, recently gave one hundred barrels of flour and five hundred pounds of bacon to the suffering poor of North Alabama, and said he would give the last farthing he had before one of them should starve. The Alabama papers say "Pass him round!"

At a bigamy suit recently instituted against a young woman in England, it turned out that one of her husbands was named Little and the other Long. One of our funny contributors, on hearing the case, said he could imagine the woman addressing her brace of husbands thus: "Love me Little—love me, Long."

The following funny advertisement of a runaway wife was recently posted in a town in Northern New York: "My nam dat Peter Koville, my nam dat Peter Koville too. He ley house and no ax me, any man dat truss him on my nam dat loss for you."

A convalescent soldier in a hospital in Paris, while stretching himself, exclaimed, Oh, God! A young and very pretty Sister of Charity ran up and inquired: "What would you God to do to you? I am His daughter." The convalescent replied: "Accept me for His son-in-law."

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.—Among the distinguished lawyers in attendance upon the Circuit Court, we are glad to meet this week Gen. Jno. C. Brown, of Pulaski—as hale, hearty and genial as ever. We saw, while in Nashville a few days since, a splendid picture of the General and Staff, which was about as handsome as anything we have seen lately.—Columbia Herald.

The subjoined is going the rounds of the Abolition press, and is being received with remarkable favor:

"One of the lady teachers in the industrial school at Petersburg, Va., was recently questioning her pupils from Scripture, and asked: "Who died for you?" "To which the little fellow shouted in reply, Abraham Lincoln!"

The time is not far distant when, among Abolitionists, the profession of faith will be that Lincoln instead of Christ died for sinners. That is the belief now among no inconsiderable portion of that party.—Chicago Times.

The Indiana I. O. of O. F. have condemned lotteries and gift enterprises as immoral.

At a recent banquet to General Longstreet, in Galveston, Texas, Dr. Wm. C. Smith offered the following toast: "Robert E. Lee—The greatest of modern Generals." General Longstreet replied: That language failed to express his admiration for Gen. Lee, but he would be pleased if the General could be so situated that he could give the command: "By nations—right wheel."

We learn from the Nashville Union and American that Elijah Allsopp, citizen of Lawrence county, Tennessee, confined in the penitentiary of this State since June, 1865, by sentence of a military commission, on the charges of robbery and a violation of the laws of war, was on Friday released and set at liberty. He was sentenced to imprisonment for fifteen years.

A list of anti-administration postmasters for dismissal, is being prepared at the Post-office Department.

COL. JOHN O'NEILL.—The enquiry has been made on every street-corner, for the last few days, as to who is Col. O'Neill, the leading character in the Fenian raid upon Canada. Consulting papers abroad we were told that he is from Tennessee. But for the kindness of our distant friends we might have lived for some time in ignorance of the important fact. Thus we have another verification of the old adage that "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country."—Union and American.

Or the prospective trial of Mr. Davis the New York Herald, of Saturday, says: "If Congress would only pass a resolution to open his prison doors and let him go whithersoever he would, the people would be perfectly satisfied. All idea of vindictiveness is absurd as well as unpopular.—Let the government treat Jeff. Davis as my Uncle Toby treated the Jeff.—open the door of Fortress Monroe and let him go forth."
